We wish to acknowledge that the land on which we gather is Treaty 6 territory and a traditional meeting ground for many Indigenous peoples. The territory on which the Augustana Campus of the University of Alberta is located provided a travelling route and home to the Cree, Blackfoot, and Métis, as it did for the Nakoda, Tsu'tina, Chipewyan, and other Indigenous peoples. Their spiritual and practical relationships to the land create a rich heritage for our learning and our life as a community.

I Need to Get This Off My Chest Not my Shirt, You Pervs...

TBH. Let's honestly talk about honesty.

Honesty. A virtue that is highly respected and frequently sought after. Such a noble, almost humbling virtue, shouldn't it be normalized in society?

In society, seemingly, honesty is a rare commodity. Maybe it's just me, but I feel like honesty doesn't exist to the same extent as perhaps it once did 'back in the day'. Maybe this is due to my demographic and current place in society...but honesty is rare to find.

When we encounter a person who is straightforward or honest, they are perceivably so admirable because of their honesty.

Ambiguity often replaces honesty, whether that be in the form of empty promises, withholding information to 'spare feelings', making generic statements or littering "maybes" across almost all conversations.

Ambiguity is the centre of contemporary relationships. Whether that be avoiding defining romantic relationships, not committing to events, or maybe not telling your friends certain truths they should maybe be aware of.

Perhaps honesty and truth are too close to reality, a reality that we are uncomfortable facing. Ambiguity eliminates commitment to the consequences of genuinely speaking for or against something.

Ambiguity is the centre of contemporary relationships.

If ambiguity and absence of honesty is the norm, I challenge you, and myself, to step out of the norm and be honest in all that you do.

Own your beliefs and morals, follow confidently the path your heart wanders. Although the path can sometimes be hard to follow, and people will try to dissuade you, staying honest will lead you in directions you never thought possible.

Honesty can open doorways and bring opportunities to your life.

POKEMON GO-NE!

Staying Relevant in a World of Mass Consumption

Sammy Lowe
Co-Editor

Gyms. Pokestops. Lures. Team Instinct, Mystic and Valour. 1800 CP Gyarados. Unless you've been living under a rock or in a cave with no Wi-Fi reception, these terms are likely to be at least somewhat familiar to you.

That is because they are all associated with Pokemon Go, a massively popular augmented-reality (AR) available on most smart devices, such as iPhone and Android.

The game, which places you in the role of a Pokemon Trainer aspiring to "Catch 'Em All", gained instant popularity in North America following its release date on July 6th this summer.

It became the most downloaded game for mobile devices in the United-States after only a month, surpassing even the fabled Candy Crush -- a favourite of moms' everywhere.

Some of the factors that contributed to this game's substantial popularity include its nostalgic value for older Pokemon fans, the innovative AR, GPS capabilities and functions it employs, as well as the social component and positive gaming community that it evokes.

Whether it was two in the afternoon or three in the morning, you could always find friendly would-be Pokemon trainers willing to trade their recent catches or point you in the direction of secret poke-hotspots.

But what started as an explosive and ubiquitous phenomenon has seemingly begun to fizzle out now that the chill of fall is beginning to set in.

While there are still a few Pokemon go-ers out and about, most of the bridges and parks that were once bustling with late-night Trainers at midnight now remain mostly empty.

Why is this? It seemed like you couldn't go five minutes this summer without being exposed to the app in one form or another. How could such an unprecedented gaming trend lose steam so quickly?

I would argue that, while some factors such as colder weather and the commencement of a new academic year are important contributors, the main driver of this decline in 'Go-ing' is the unavoidable reality of our consumerist society.

We demand high quality 'stuff' to consume, spend two weeks fawning and obsessing over this 'stuff', and then subsequently discard it to make way for something newer and more exciting.

This trend of demand-consume-discard cycles again and again, and encompasses everything from apps to coffee beverages to all forms of media.

Who knows how long it will take for this cycle to render Pokemon Go completely irrelevant, or why countless phenomena like this one fall by the wayside while others like Starbucks continue to pervade and remain fixed in our society?

Maybe if Pokemon Go introduces an update which includes a Pumpkin Spice Pokeball or a Frappuccino-mon, it will survive to see another day.

Treaty Bear

We have a new addition to our campus, the Treaty Bear, by sculptor Stewart Steinhauer of the Saddle Cree Nation. The Treaty Bear is on loan to our campus from the sculptor for one year.

Treaty Bear is a six territory marker bear, and is a part of a series. The sculpture's polished granite surface is inviting to touch and the Treaty Bear reads "We Are All Related" in both English and Cree syllables.

The Treaty Bear was welcomed to Campus on September 14th in a ceremony where Associate Dean Academic Dr. Karsten Mundel acknowledged Treaty Six Territory.

You can read more about the Treaty Bear, sculptor Stewart Steinhauer, and the University of Alberta's commitment to Truth and Reconciliation on the University of Alberta home page.

Alcohol Policy

I met with Randal Nickel, the Executive Director of Student Life, last week to discuss the alcohol policy on campus and in residence. Though he could not comment on how the alcohol policy is currently benefiting students, he was adamant about revisiting the policy this academic year.

"My commitment to you, with the support of Dean Berger, is to revisit the policy to make it more effective to the needs and lifestyles of students in a safe and effective manner."

This doesn't mean that the alcohol ban will be scrapped altogether with no work to be done by students. To ensure that Augustana Campus and residence remains a safe environment for everyone, there may have to be safe drinking seminars and specific rules and guidelines to be put in place.

If you have any comments, questions, or concerns about the alcohol policy, feel free to contact Randal Nickel either by email (mickel@ualberta.ca) or in his office upstairs in Faith and Life.

With the arrival of the Treaty Bear, the new ASA councillors and a new intercity bus route (Tues and Fri), Augustana is quite the bumpin' campus!

Lion Bear Fox B.C. Band Plays the Bailey

by CAROLYN VENTER

This Oct. 22nd you are in for a treat. For only 15 dollars you can share the company of a band that calls themselves, the Lion Bear Fox.

To put it in layman's terms, that's the same price as a formal ticket or a pillow with Nicholas Cage's face on it (Amazon.ca).

The band hails from British Columbia and consists of Christopher Arruda (Lion), Cory Woodward (Bear), and Ryan McMahon (Fox).

Unlike the Bareknaked Ladies, this band believes in the importance of its image. Ryan says, "I don't know if I would take us seriously if the Fox was up there in shorts and sandals."

On the other hand, Ryan hadn't heard of the term beard grooming before, so how hip can they really be?

When I asked how the band got together Ryan told me he "had invited Chris and Cory to go on a Mr. Sensitive acoustic tour with him" and that their band name had developed from each of their spirit animals.

Too ashamed to ask them one of the most hated band questions of all time, I turned to their Wikipedia page, which describes their sound as "folk rock". Unfortunately, Wikipedia couldn't give us the answer to Ryan's least favourite interview question, "Boxers or Briefs?"

He did, however, tell us that he has a "nook" of baseball cards in his basement, and that his favourite artists as of late are Will Hoge and Blake Mills (if you know who those people are, you are a better person than I).

Not unlike many of us spending thousands of dollars on a degree from a liberal arts college, the band defines success as "being able to make a comfortable living while still doing what [you] love."

When I asked Ryan why people should come out and see their show he stated, "We're all just trying to be a better person than we were the day before, and a lot of the themes in our songs describe just that."

So if you don't care about being a good person, looking cool, or having fun, then this just isn't your show. As for the rest of you, I'll see you at the Bailey on Oct. 22nd at 8 pm!

Familiar Faces

Get to know your Augustana Faculty

by JENNIFER HA

Familiar Faces is a regular piece that features faculty and staff members who are new or new to their positions around Augustana, and their answers to a series of non-formal questions.

This week, we asked Jayla Brewer, Emily Merklinger, and Dr. Judy Liao the following questions:

1) What do you carry to school to hold your things? What can one find in it?

2) What is your fall beverage of choice? Is it the notorious pumpkin spice latte? Do you have any opinions on the pumpkin spice trend?

3) What was your first job? How does it compare to your current one?

Jayla Brewer

Jayla Brewer is now the Acting Assistant Supervisor for the Learning, Advising & Beyond office.

1) Purse, generally a rather large purse. One could find all sorts of random items such as my cell phone and charger, my lunch/snacks, business cards, dog treats for my puppy, random receipts, lip gloss. The normal stuff.

2) Beverage choice is generally just coffee, but if I'm treating myself the occasional PSL is delicious. I do however like to mix things up so I don't generally order the same drink twice in a row.

3) I would consider my first "real" job being a lifeguard and swim instructor, which I did for 15 years, even while I first started working at Augustana. Obviously lifeguarding is a little bit different than working in an office setting, but the skills used in both are quite similar. Being a lifeguard taught me about public relations, how to deal with conflict, to teach and explain concepts, and to work as a team. These are all skills that I use on a daily basis, but now I get to be dry and don't have to wear a swim suit every day!

Emily Merklinger

Emily Merklinger is a sessional lecturer in English for the Department of Humanities.

1) I have a Vans backpack with an alien patch and a bunch of buttons on it. One can usually, but not always, find: the usual job related stuff (lecture notes, textbooks, notebooks, fancy pens); the novel I'm currently reading (Sarah Waters' The Paying Guests); a pizza bun; headphones; around five ridiculously overpriced lipsticks; and, depending when I last cleaned it, maybe some candy wrappers.

2) Sadly, I can't admit that my favourite fall beverage of choice is the notorious pumpkin spice latte. I usually just drink too much black coffee. I will admit that I enjoy the occasional vanilla soy latte though.

3) I think my first "real" job was working in the deli at Superstore. I must have been about fourteen. It was a pretty traumatic experience. I've been a vegetarian since childhood and it was super unpleasant to rip apart and/or skewer headless chickens every shift. I think I lasted a little less than a month. Teaching is much better for obvious reasons (re: no headless chickens). Beyond those reasons, it's almost unbelievable that I am paid to research and talk about things that I love and spend my time talking about anyway. I could talk about fiction endlessly.

Dr. Judy Liao

Dr. Judy Liao is the new Assistant Professor of Sport Studies for the Department of Social Science.

1) I usually carry a briefcase to school. My brother bought that for me, saying "you need to look like you actually have a job and an adult, stop using your 10-year-old backpack". So I retired my backpack which has been with me through my two graduate degrees and various different conferences. I will miss it. Besides the essentials (wallet, keys...) one thing I always have in my bag is pens. I make sure there are pens, multiple of them, in every single one of my bags, my casual messenger bag, briefcase, outdoor backpack, sport duffel bag, and my travel luggage. I am one of those who will pocket a free pen at a conference. The first stationary item I requested as soon as I started this job is a box of pens. So if you ever need a pen....

2) I don't really have seasonal drinks. I like a good cup of coffee (black, please) and tea (no sugar no milk, also herbal tea is not tea, people). I don't like anything messing up my drinks, so I don't like any flavored fancy drink. I guess I am pretty old-school that way (and pens!). If I have opinions about pumpkin spice trend, I think they would be slightly inappropriate for a student publication. Just ask my students, I am judgmental.

3) This is my first "real" job. I've done a couple different things here and there. After finishing college and ditching my law degree, I actually worked at a sport marketing company for a little while. I wrote some fluffy sponsorship proposals, press releases, etc. It's a little bit funny thinking about it now, because I talk about all the issues in sport, media, and sponsorship in class. Also, before I moved to Camrose, I was on my one-year self-imposed sabbatical (meaning post-graduation and unemployed) in Vancouver, [where] I picked up some hours working at Starbucks. The similarity? They both pay me to do something I like. At Starbucks, I get free coffee, here, I talk, and judge (or should I say "evaluate"?) people.

The Art of Going Down...

To Australia To Play Hockey

by CAROLYN VENTER

Ever heard of the AIHL? Of course you haven't. It's the Australian Ice Hockey League. The current champions of the league are the Newcastle North Stars, and Augustana has some claim to their fame.

Beau Taylor, Scott Swiston, and Connor McLaughlin all played for the league this past summer.

"We rented a tent truck and drove up the east coast. We went sky diving and even ended up setting off the sprinklers and flooding the parking lot of the Sydney opera house."

"Yeah my summer wasn't much fun either," I offered.

When I asked them how they replicated the magic of Australia in Camrose, Alberta, they stated "Well, it's very different. Winter in Australia still gets up to 21 degrees and they play European style hockey."

They explained that the European style was a lot cleaner so I asked them if they enjoyed the violence in hockey that is more present in Canada.

"Yeah, as much as people want to get rid of it, it's part of the game," said Beau.

"Players will take your number and get you back later," said Scott. "I will say that I went to my first hockey game in four years last Friday and ended up chanting 'Now beat him with your stick!' all the while Dean Berger was only four seats away from me."

It's the players' last year at Au-

Connor McLaughlin (left), Beau Taylor (center) and Scott Swiston (right) brought plenty of Vikings spirit to our friends from down under

-gustana this year and upon asking them what their future plans were they stated that they wanted to play professional hockey in Europe.

"What if that doesn't work out?" I asked rudely. "Well, I'll probably do the big boy thing and get a job," replied Scott.

Let's hope for these boys, and so many others at Augustana, that it doesn't come to that.

Fun fact, both Scott and Beau's most inspiring person is a man called Elon Musk. For those of us who aren't business majors, he is the inven-tor of PayPal!

So if you love hockey, violence, people who have been to Australia, and PayPal, you should come check out the 'bromance on ice' as I now like to refer to as hockey.

Beau states "We've played together for five years now and it would be nice to have one more championship with Augustana under our belt."

5 Quick Tips to Improve Your Dating Life

by KEN WINDER

1) When they say no to or during any activity, take that as no, and find something else to do. Like binge watching Rick and Morty or playing Super Smash Bros Melee.

2) If an individual states that they aren't romantically inclined towards you, take it as such and don't harass said individual into changing their mind.

3) Take an individual on a date and get to know them as human beings. If the pace and attraction is right, then great. If it isn't, respect that and don't push for more.

4) Respect every individual's feeling and comfort levels. In doing so, you present an opportunity for them to feel valued and dignified which is a good thing for everyone involved.

5) Just have fun. Don't go to any function, gathering, or meeting with any expectations. If you had fun, focus on that aspect and don't expect more.

Just following these five quick tips is an easy and effective way to avoid that pesky sexual grey area. If you would like more information, please google Sarah Silverman's Ten Rape Prevention Tips tweet.

Putting Dark Energy in the Spotlight

by CRYSTAL ROSENE

The universe is expanding. In fact, this was first determined 87 years ago by the famous astronomer, Edwin Hubble. Hubble proposed that the speed at which an object is receding is proportional to its distance from Earth with the formula $v = H_0 d$. Astronomers began to piece together the evolution of our universe from the time of the Big Bang and thought they were close to understanding where the universe is ultimately going as well.

Since the Big Bang was essentially a giant explosion, it made sense to assume it followed a standard model of any explosion: that at some point, the total energy of the pieces would dissipate, and thus, come to a stop.

However, astronomers began to note some really weird things happening the farther away they observed. Hubble's Law predicted that extremely distant objects would recede faster than closer objects, and he evidence concluded that this is the case—albeit much faster than expected. In other words, the universe isn't just expanding, it's accelerating!

Now of course, the natural question is why? Why is the universe not slowing down, as predicted? And what could possibly account for this strange result?

It appears that there is some unknown force at work here, some anti-gravity that pushes everything perpetually outwards instead of pulling it in. In order to have such immen--ense effects on something as large as our entire universe...well there must be an awful lot of this strange entity.

Everything that exists in our universe from radiation to matter (also including dark matter!) is only responsible for 20 - 40% of the density of the universe! The rest must therefore be this unknown force that is so plentiful. To make it even more interesting, it is also something that cannot be detected (yet). This mysterious entity that accounts for the remaining density of the universe is what astronomers have labelled 'dark energy'.

The elusiveness of dark energy stems from its apparent nature. If it were a form of radiation, astronomers could use detectors aboard orbiting satellites to pick up traces of its existence, but so far this has not been the case. Similarly, dark energy seemingly has no identifiable gravitational effects that can be detected. (This is a method used to detect dark matter.)

Whether we can detect it or not, the data shows that dark energy definitely exists. If anything, it could be said that dark energy is more prominent now than it was in the past. As the universe expands, the density of matter and radiation both decrease, but the density of dark matter has stayed the same. This means that we live in what is called a 'dark energy dominated universe'.

It's interesting to think that despite all we know, the majority of the universe remains a mystery to us. But I imagine it won't be long before new evidence emerges for understanding dark energy and its role in the universe.

Just because you are breaking hearts and watching Breaking Bad doesn't mean you have to break the bank.

Navigating Camrose on a Student Budget

by JENNIFER HA

We've all heard the promotional spiel: attending Augustana can equal smaller class sizes, bigger opportunities, additional scholarships, and overall a really amazing liberal arts education. What the brochures neglect to mention, however, are the perks that being a Viking has for your wallet.

Compared to living in a major city, Camrose offers cheaper rent, less mileage on your car, and overall lower living costs. Furthermore, the city has several spots that offer bargains on special nights or just for students—meaning your study breaks can feature more than just instant noodles and your roommate's Netflix subscription.

Daily Deals

The Canadian Brewhouse: From cheap tacos on Tuesdays to a full-on shrimp and steak dinner on Saturdays, the Brewhouse offers special-priced food specials on every day of the week—with drink specials to match!

Mr. Mike's Steakhouse Casual: On weekdays, Mr. Mike's has happy hour from 3pm to 6pm, meaning appetizers as cheap as $4 additional to awesome drink specials. Also, the restaurant has "Lodge Night" on Thursdays after 8pm, where dozens of items are half-priced.

Bulk Barn: On Wednesdays, students get a 10% discount at Camrose's hub for bulk-priced nuts, seeds, tea, granola... and candy. Because you didn't have a hard enough time resisting the urge to buy a pound of peach rings before.

Boston Pizza: Along with Wednesday wing night, where wings are half priced, the restaurant also has discounted pasta on Tuesdays and famous $11.30 oz drinks on Fishbowl Fridays.

Hart House Wine and Tapa: Every Wednesday $5 beers and $6 house wines 7pm-9pm.

Flashing Your OneCard

Co-op: Co-op will take 10% off your entire grocery bill when you present your student ID.

Shoppers Drug Mart: You can get 20% off regular priced items with your OneCard at Shoppers—including luxury fragrances and cosmetics.

Love Sushi: Whether you're just getting bubble tea or splurging on a sashimi combo, you can get 10% off your bill while supporting this local business!

East Side Mario's: East Side Mario's will take 10% off your food bill with a valid student ID, regardless of how many loaves of bread you eat.

Duggan Cinemas: Showing your OneCard gets you a movie ticket for $7, so you can afford to splurge on that large bag of popcorn (which also gets a refill!).

Safeway: On the first Tuesday of every month, Safeway takes 10% off of your grocery bill. If you spend more than $35, you also get a coupon that gives you a discount on gas!

Campus Horoscopes

Aquarius (Jan 21 - Feb 19)

I have no idea how your October is going to turn out so to be safe I would avoid any dangerous or stressful situations. Just chill for like the whole 31 days.

Pisces (Feb 20 - Mar 20)

You know what, I didn't even make a horoscope for you this month. You're on your own for this month. Good luck.

Aries (Mar 21 - Apr 20)

Look out for betrayal and purple this month. If any of your friends are wearing purple and reading The Art of War, watch out.

Taurus (Apr 21 - May 21)

Stay away from bubble baths. Instead, buy a lottery ticket; your lucky numbers are 6, 28, 49, 3, 11, 37.

Gemini (May 22 - June 21)

You are feeling really stressed this month but avoid over eating because you will gain weight...because that's how that works.

Cancer (June 22 - July 23)

It's never too late to reinvent your image, this October go to the Halloween store and try on every costume until you find something better than what you've got going on.

Leo (July 24 - Aug 23)

Your friends are worried about you. I don't know why and I don't really care.

Virgo (Aug 24 - Sep 23)

Aren't you so happy that it's no longer September? You just narrowly escaped the social event that was your birth. Good news though, it's almost Christmas. Bring on the Yuletide bonding.

Libra (Sep 24 - Oct 23)

This month, since it's your birthday it's finally time to treat yourself and everyone you know by finally getting that haircut. While you're at it you should also brush your teeth. Mmmmm, minty fresh.

Scorpio (Oct 24 - Nov 22)

October is your month of romance. That is, if your definition of romance is not having a romantic partner.

Sagittarius (Nov 23 - Dec 21)

You know what would make my October better? If you pretended to be the pet sea monkeys I never got as a child.

Capricorn (Dec 22 - Jan 20)

Try baking this month. You need the practice and it's not like you have midterms or anything...

Ask Amber

Your sassy, satirical self-help guru

Dear Amber,

As a student, I like to work hard and play hard. I spend the week doing schoolwork so that I can go out to the Taproom and OCs on the weekends with my friends. That being said, I've run into a bit of a problem... partying on the weekends started with "Thank God it's Friday", but that has quickly turned into "Thirsty Thursday", "Wing Wednesday", "Taco Tuesday", and so on.

Basically, my friends want to go out and have a good time almost every night. I really want to go out and party with my friends, but I'm worried that my bank account and my grades won't be able to handle it. How do I balance my academic and social life?

Signed,

Too Lit to Quit

Dear Too Lit to Quit,

Okay, the most important thing I need to know is what year you are in. If you are in your first year you can multiply the amount of partying you are doing by 10x. If you are in second year you need to subtract 4%. Third year, cut the partying down by half. Fourth year, you can only party every second weekend. Get the picture?

It also depends what your major is. If you are a math/physics major, like I clearly am, you need to put more time in than if you're major was, oh I don't know, music. I also need to know what kind of future aspirations you have.

If you only need to pass your classes you can disregard everything I've previously mentioned and party until the cops stop you. On the other hand, if you like to live in the A range, you have no business taking my advice ever. Do some soul searching and write me back and I'll be happy to help.

Dear Amber,

I love your advice column! Definitely words to live by. Now that this is my last year, I am planning to marry the man of my dreams this August. Although his parents are wonderful, I'm a little concerned about the role that they still play in his life... particularly his mother.

She still does my fiancé's laundry, makes his lunches daily, and cleans his house. She doesn't even live with him! I certainly love my fiancé and am excited to start our new lives together, but I don't want his mother around all the time catering to his whim. Any thoughts?

Sincerely,

Mommy Issues

Dear Mommy Issues,

Yikes. It really doesn't sound to me like this guy is ready for marriage. The most important thing is that you clarify that you won't be doing any of that crap when you are married. Also make sure he knows that his relationship with his mother is strange.

I think the best and healthiest way to resolve this issue is to set aside a day where you teach him all basic life skills. Hopefully he will take pride in cooking his own grilled cheeses and him and his mom can do normal things together like talk about when you will be bearing his children.

I suggest you watch the movie 'License to Wed' from 2007 starring Robin Williams and Mandy Moore. Worse come to worse, you might have to sit Elaine (Judy/Dianne/other generic 47 year old woman's name) down and talk to her about how her behavior may be detrimental to, not only her son, but the larger society as a whole.
